

Flughafen Wien Group in H1/2020: COVID-19 Crisis Severely Burdens the Aviation Sector – Vienna Airport Registers Two-Thirds Fewer Passengers, Group Revenue Down 51.2%, EBITDA Decrease of 73.3% but Still Positive at € 48.9 Million, Earnings Turn Negative to Minus € 18.2 Million

- Only sluggish improvement in passenger volume in July 2020 due to the coronavirus crisis, drop in number of passengers of -81.9% in the Flughafen Wien Group in July (-81.8% at Vienna Airport) despite gradual resumption of flight traffic
- Massive cost savings programme of € 220 million, € 100 million reduction in investment projects and company-wide short-time work for approx. 6,000 employees are the cornerstones of crisis response efforts
- Development of Airport City at Vienna Airport continues despite the pandemic, the first tenants move into the new Office Park 4 – one of Austria’s most modern and energy-efficient office buildings is put into operation

“There is a threat looming on the horizon of the crisis extending even longer without functioning international flight traffic. This not only applies to tourism and conferences but also to large parts of the economy and industry. Whoever is not present today on the marketplace in such an export-oriented economy like Austria will not have any orders and thus no work tomorrow. For this reason, unified European-wide and global travel regulations as well as a comprehensive testing strategy are urgently needed, so that extensive international business and holiday travel is once again possible. To support Austria’s good entry rules, Vienna Airport has already successfully introduced PCR tests for travellers. Recently more than 800 tests have been carried out each day”, states Günther Ofner, Member of the Management Board of Flughafen Wien AG. “Life and also the development of the Airport City are continuing despite the pandemic. During these very days, the first tenants are moving into the new Office Park 4, one of Austria’s most modern and energy-efficient office buildings”, Günther Ofner adds.

“Passenger volume has increased since the beginning of July compared to the weeks beforehand but is still significantly below the level reached in previous years. The number of travellers in the first two weeks of August climbed to about 25,000 per day. Nevertheless, it remains to be seen how flight traffic will develop in the coming months in the light of the growing number of people across the globe who are inflicted with COVID-19. In any case, the related short-term changes in travel regulations strongly inhibit passenger volumes. COVID-19 will remain with us for some time to come. For this reason, unified international regulations for air travel are urgently needed in times of the coronavirus, along with the electronic recording of travel data, especially for entering the Schengen Area”, explains Julian Jäger, Member of the Management Board of Flughafen Wien AG.

January-June 2020: 65.3% fewer passengers at Vienna Airport
